Public Announcement:

Merging of two EducationUSA centers in Tokyo for enhanced service and convenience.

From April 1, 2016, two EducationUSA centers located in Tokyo will merge to provide greater service and convenience. The reference room and personnel involved in EducationUSA at Fulbright Japan will move and combine with EducationUSA at the American Center Japan. All of the resources, reference materials, and services will now be conveniently located in one central location. The department formerly known as the Educational Information Service (EIS) will be rebranded as EducationUSA. In order to prepare for this merger, March 25 will be the last day to use the reference room and advising services at Fulbright Japan.

The mission of Fulbright Japan is to promote mutual understanding between Japan and the U.S. through educational exchange. For over 50 years Fulbright Japan has provided trusted reference materials and advising to the public regarding study abroad and education in both countries. Fulbright Japan will continue to serve in this role as a part of EducationUSA and welcomes assisting all interested visitors in the new location at the American Center Japan.

Please access the website below for further details about the address, map, open hours, visiting the reference room, or making an appointment for individual advising.
